Harmon Clayton Killebrew 1936 - 2011

World Sports Humanitarian Hall of Fame Remembers National Baseball Hall of Famer and Minnesota Twins Great Harmon Killebrew

BOISE -- Harmon Killebrew, a 2006 inductee of the World Sports Humanitarian Hall of Fame, passed away Tuesday morning at his home in Scottsdale, Ariz. He was 74. Killebrew, who had been battling esophageal cancer, died peacefully, with his wife Nita, and their family at his side.

"Harmon Killebrew was a hall of famer on the field and in the community," said World Sports Humanitarian Hall of Fame board member and former sportscaster Larry Maneely. "Harmon's achievements on the baseball diamond are only matched by his record of community service, commitment to his family and as a gentleman. We will miss our friend greatly."

A member of the 2006 class of the World Sports Humanitarian Hall of Fame and 1984 class of the National Baseball Hall of Fame, Killebrew will forever be remembered for his 573 career home runs, as the 1969 American League Most Valuable Player, and as one of the greatest baseball hitters of his era.

Throughout a 22-year Major League Baseball career, Killebrew, nicknamed "Killer" was known as a muscular slugger that was feared by opposing pitchers for his home run prowess.

On Friday, the Minnesota Twins released a statement from Killebrew, who said he has "exhausted all options" for treatment of the "awful disease" and that the cancer is incurable. "It is with profound sadness that I share with you that my continued battle with esophageal cancer is coming to an end," Killebrew said. "My illness has progressed beyond my doctors' expectation of cure."

Born June 29, 1936, the native of Payette, Idaho broke into the major leagues in 1954 with the American League Washington Senators. After playing seven seasons in the nation's capital, the franchise moved to the Minneapolis where Killebrew logged 14 seasons with the Twins. He finished his pro baseball career in 1975 with the Kansas City Royals.

Killebrew and Nita had nine children.
